A Young Voyagea.—A little boy four or five years old, while playing hear a deep gatter in a street in Indianapolis, Sunday afternoon, lost his inlance, and fell into the water. It was after a rain and the current was rapid. The boy floated swiftly with the stream the Sentinei says, and before he could be rescated had passed under a platform which extends over the gutter for four or five humbed feet. The fittle follow floated along in the water for nearly ten in inners before he emerged at the south end of the wooden tunnel. When had ran to the opening to water for him, life seemed to he extinct. He was treated after a while, and is now in a fair way to recovery. It was very fortmate that the had did not lodge in the tunnel while on his involuntary trip, for had he done so, he would more that the tunnel while on his involuntary trip, for had he done so, he would not trip, for had he done so, he would not trip, for had he done so, he would not to decould have reached him. FARM AND GARDEN

PROPIT OF ENGLISH PARMING. Most of those who "do" England, tell us on their return how superior English agriculture is to ours, and would have us believe that we have a great deal yet to learn as to how to make the farm pay. Many little things, however, that come before us from time to time indicate pretty surely that we are a long way shead of them, and that if any one is to learn it is the "eld felks at home." We do not, it is true. get as many bushels of wheat to the nore as they do, nor as many tons of hay; and in many other particulars the pearances are against us. On this ground the traveling friends who lecture us are perhaps excusable. If they laid the ability to look deeper, things would have a more encouraging look for us. The proper way to measure success is by the results from a given amount of foice expended. Judged by this standard, we doubt whether any body of agriculturists in the world can ated by undertraining. As we have often said, it is doubtful whether this us in some cases. Germantown Tele- going up hill.

LAND WASHING,-One of the greatest objections to our farming operations in this country is the tendency of our rich soils to wash off and rapidly deterorate in fertility. Another misfortune is the indifference with which many It is plane to any observing mind that a field of rich, fertile soil will yield double neglected, and suffered other malpragtices. I have in mind now the case of a so-called farmer who allowed an old roadway, a quarter of a mile in length, to wash so deep that a plough could hardly cross it, when ten relatives work with the spade would have prevented it. And often we see large impossible ditches form through sometimes valuable land, with no effort to stay the fearful waste. This, with truthful voice, verifies the old saying, "a slatch in time saves nine". A few hints in regard to remedies are in order. First, the land can be plowed so as to help the case by running the furrows crosswise of the rills. I prefer to have the water flow in straight tills at regular internow in straight rills at regular inter-vals, and to prevent these from washing the a kettle of water or on a hot deeper, pack corn stalks, large green hearth, till the juize will ton; strain, weeds, the straight brush, etc., in the and to every part and halfar pound of bottom and allow the grass and weeds sugar; give one boll and skim it, to grow in these ditches. Thus the When cold, put equal quantities of water has something to wear on, and juice and brainly; shake well, and but with a little care much sell can thus be saved. But the best way to preserve ferred. the fertility of the land, as any intelligent farmer knows, is to seed down of grass, especially clover, not forgetting the importance of the proper use of maummer than tonistoes. And while heir cultivation is very general, but few persons know how to grow and develop their successfully: The vines are great growers, and in rich loose soil all that is necessary to raise and have them gled wildwood," is to cultivate well and keep the weeds down. These tangled, luxurund, topsy-turvy vines, while they may produce abundantly, never produce so good fruit, nor do they ripen as it should be. It is necessary, in order to have good tomatoes and to have them early, to set the plants about four feet apart and keep than well staked and tied up. A good stake can be made: by outting small bushes down, leaving a them about five feet long, with some of the limbs on ; drive these stakes down yield of their land is greater. They give a nicer and neater flush to things than we do, and no doubt the whole applications are negative as October the plant grows. Keep the laterals well pinched off and the finit will be much carlier and fluor than if the vines are tumbled into one undistinguishable mass. The young fruit needs the sun, and any system of prusing and training that will give it to them will be better than letting them fall down .- stm-ruan Potron

Our wheat experience of the past winter suggests the lesson. There is no doubt new that our wheap crop is a partial failure, and that the cause is one which we have often pointed out as injuriously affecting the wheat plant, the freezing of water in the soft. The water could high get away rapidly, the frost came and held it, and the wheat plant is destroyed. This is the explanation of the injury which comes from all quarters. Much of this could have been avoided by open plow furrows after the grain was sown. In England terms the soft of the second of the potato.
